The prayer of gratitude has been said, and the dirge has been sung at the tomb of slavery. The stirring strains of martial music, the swinging battalions of troops, the citizens in holiday attire, the bright faces and glad voices of the day, proclaim this an occasion of more than ordinary interest. And now, at the close of this anniversary day, while the pride, pomp, and circumstance of the occasion pass to their place in history, let us turn to the muse of meditation. Under this sacred shelter, whose platform has been the fortress of every honest and humane interest, we may find all the conditions friendly to reflection and instruction. Experience holds in lifted hand the flaming torch of knowledge, while our hearts know full well the serious lessons this day would teach us.
