EXTRACT FROM THE UNITED STATES MAIL, JULY, 1863. DISTRIBUTION. At the late convention of special agents of the Post-Office Department, held at Cleveland, Ohio, the subject of letter distribution being under discussion, a paper was read from which we here make some extracts. They will no doubt be interesting as showing the origin, objects, and history of our distribution system. # * * * * * In reference to many of the offices mentioned, distribution was discontinued while the mails were yet carried in stages; the delays and detentions were then being found prejudicial to the public interests. As railroads were constructed and the mails carried upon them the evils of the system became more apparent, occasioning delays of from twelve to twenty-four hours in correspondence and causing very loud and just complaint. Since the completion of 24,000 miles...
